To cook their rations in one utensil, for one day, would require a frying pan nearly a mile wide, while to make the coffee for this number would require a pot as big as the average three-story house. Six and one-half tons of sugar and two thousand cans of condensed milk would be required every day for an army of 100,000 men, who would also consume 75,000 pounds of bacon or corned beef, 15,000 pounds of beans, 2,000 gallons of molasses, 500 gallons of vinedack pepper.

This man was Gail Borden, who had but then recently laid out the city of Galveston, and while surveying in the vast and almost unpopulated territory of Texas he learned the necessity of possessing some portuble, condensed form of food. On leaving Texas, the inventor settled in New York state, and turning his attention to milk, he perfected a process of condensing it which is now in use throughout the world. Gall Borden was born at Norwich, New York, November 6, 1801, and died at

Harvey's Creek, Texas, January 11, 1874. The first great impetus given to the use of his condensed milk, to which he gave the name of "Eagle Brand," was furnished by the demand for supplies for the armies of the United States during the Civil war, and through the occasiona capture of United States supply trains, he "Eagle Brand" condensed milk became widely known to the soldiers on both sides. Now no army supply train is onsidered complete without its quota of "Eagle Brand" condensed milk and Eagle Brand Condensed Coffee, and since the health and comfort of the soldiers are of prime importance in war, Gali Border has rendered a greater service by his invention of condensed food and condensed milk than have many of the generals whose names are prominent in military

We print herewith a portrait of Gail Borden, whose rugged features indicate the originality, energy and tenacity which were characteristic of the man and which enabled him to surmount innumer able mechanical difficulties in perfecting the invention which has proven such a boon to soldiers, sailors, miners, travelors and humanity in general, not forgetting many thousands of bables which have been raised to vigorous health on the 'Eagle Brand" condensed milk.
